FORTUNE TO WIDOW

Waukegan, Ill.- Last May an iron worker at a building project found a metal box containing $44,525. Recently, a judge ruled that Mrs. June Siskind, a book-store operator, proved to his satisfaction that she owned the money. She said her sister, Mary Funk, hid the money when they formerly lived on the property and that she could not find the money box after her sister's death in 1949. Albert Sorenson, 34, who found the money, said he was satisfied Mrs. Siskind was the rightful owner. He received a reward from Mrs. Siskind.

The snowballs will be packed in dry-ice cartons.

Toy-Gun Bandits Guilty

Knoxville, Tenn.- Although attorneys defending two Knoxville men on trial for robbing a store of $271 with a toy pistol argued they couldn't be guilty of armed robbery the jury disagreed. The pair was convicted.

Gets It Going and Coming

Monroe, Mich. — John J. Saunders, 35, was ticketed by police for drunk driving as he was driving south to Cleveland on January 13. Three days later they ticketed him again on the same charge, as he was en route home, coming north from Cleveland.

Commission Intnsifies Law Enforcement

Enforcement of Virginia's laws against using bait for the purpose of taking wild birds and animals was greatly intensified during the past hunting season. While full reports are not yet in, there were more arrests and convictions than ever before in the history of the State. These arrests were made by the Commission's law enforcement personnel and were particularly numerous among waterfowlers.

The Act of the General Assembly is very specific: "It shall be unlawful to occupy any baited blind or other baited place for the purpose of taking or attempting to take any wild bird or animal or to put out bait or salt for any wild bird or animal for the purpose of taking or killing the same unless permitted by a regulation of the Commission." An exception is made in baiting predatory or undesirable species, or baiting traps for taking furbearers.

Federal laws are also specific in regard to baiting waterfowl, but there has been a great deal of illegal baiting for the purpose of taking waterfowl and the Commission is making a definite attempt through use of its law enforcement personnel to break up the practice. The local courts have been cooperative in punishing offenders.

Many law-abiding duck hunters have complained of poor shooting because the birds were shunning their blinds and pitching in to other blinds in the vicinity which were illegally baited with corn or other grain. There is no justice in that, and the Commission is determined, through use of its own enforcement personnel, to break up the practice of illegal baiting throughout the State.

Despite the fact that there is constant pressure on both the Federal and State authorities on the part of a minority of hunters for liberalization of the restrictions against the use of bait, it is abundantly evident that shooting game over bait will never be legalized in Virginia. It is imperative that violators of existing laws, who take advantage of their fellow sportsmen, be arrested and brought into court.

Equipment was added and special law enforcement personnel were assigned during the past hunting season to the waterfowl areas with orders to arrest hunters guilty of violation of the laws against use of bait or employment of any other illegal practices in pursuit of waterfowl.

Appomattox is a growing town.

SEEK TWO BIOLOGISTS FOR FISH DIVISION OF STATE GAME COMMISION

Continuing efforts are bing made to obtain the services of two more highly trained biologists to be added to the staff of the fish division of the State Game Commission.

When there are 40 vacancies in other Southern States, as anxious to find well-qualified men as Virginia, it is difficult to find men who meet all the requirements.

For a long time many of the colleges have been training game technicians but, until very recent years, there have been few opportunities for young men to acquire scientific degrees in work with fish. Passage of the Dingell-Johnson Act, giving the States more money with which to pursue research and carry on other activities in connection with fish management, not only has opened new fields for ambitious young men but has given impetus to the colleges in setting up courses of instruction.

Judging from the comments of many interested sportsmen, expansion of the fish division has been one of the most popular moves made by the Commission in recent years. Hunters and landowners have reaped many benefits from the services of the game technicians operating in all sections of the State. Efforts are now being made to build up a staff of fish biologists, two are already at work under the direction of Robert G. Martin, himself a highly trained man, who is assistant to the chief of the division. Two more are to be employed as soon as qualified men are available.

The three men already at work have accomplished a great deal in the past year in laying the groundwork for more extended future activities. Thus far it is planned for three technicians to be stationed in Eastern Virginia and two West of the mountains. The fish division has always been handicapped through the lack of manpower to do many of the things needed to be done.

The Carrier Saratoga floats out for its final fitting.

HOME DEMONSTRATION OBSERVANCE SET FOR APRIL 29 — MAY 5

Virginia will join in observance of the 11th National Home Demonstration Week, April 29, to May 5.

Miss Maude E. Wallace, assistant director of the VPI Agricultural Extension Service and in charge of the home demonstration program in Virginia, says the theme of the observance will be "Today's Home Builds Tomorrow's World."

Objectives of the week are: to acquaint the general public with the total Extension Service, and its edication program for homemakers; to strengthen local planning and participation; to acquaint the homemaker with research relating to the home and family; to help families understand the broad problems of agriculture and their relation to local, national, and world affairs; and to recognize volunteer leaders whose services have contributed to better homes and community life.
